

DISCORD GLOSSARY

01

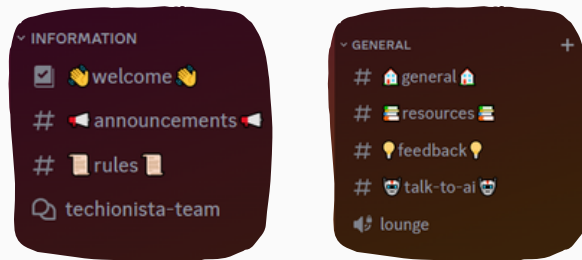

Server

A server on Discord is a dedicated space where users can communicate with each other. A server's goal is to bring people together around a common interest or topic.

02

Channel

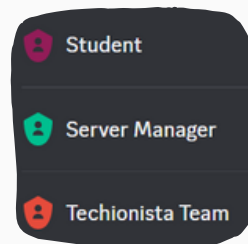

Within a server, channels are separate spaces for different types of discussions or activities. The 2 main types are text-based channels for chatting and voice channels for real-time voice communication.

03

Role

A role is a label or tag assigned to a user within a server. Roles can have various permissions and can help distinguish different members based on their roles, responsibilities, or positions in a community.

04

DM (Direct Message)

DMs are private conversations between individual users on Discord. They can be used for one-on-one communication or for group conversations with multiple participants.

05

Admin

An admin, short for administrator, is a user with higher-level permissions in a server. They have more control over the server's settings, such as managing roles and permissions, and have the ability to make significant changes.